SHORTER TERM SEEN IF SCHOOL LEVY FAILS

Continuance of 3-Mill Revenue Necessary for 9-Month Program Required by Educational Authorities

Editors Note—Knowing that renewal of the three-mill school levy is absolutely essential for adequate maintenance of Marion county schools, the Star wishes to provide its readers with all possible information on this vitally important matter.

With that purpose in view, a series of articles dealing with various phases of the school situation and necessity of the levy will be published preceding election day.

When the levy will be submitted to voters, one of these articles appears below.

The board of education is depending on renewal of the three mill levy for more than one fourth of the total revenue needed to keep the city schools in operation nine months next year.

The $300,000 annual revenue the levy would insure represents the cost of two and one-half months of school, and shortening the term is virtually the only course left to school officials if the levy is not renewed.

Suplt. C. A. Hudson has stated that one way other than shortening the term by which the schools could operate without the levy is to raise the rate.

Mr. Hudson said that the average of 25 per cent in 1932 and 1934 and no upward adjustments have been made in the levy.

He said that the levy is a very important matter and that it is the duty of the voters to decide whether or not to renew it.

Old Fort Mills Set Date for Soy Bean Purchases

Processing Plant Will Start Buying on Nov. 10, Officials of Company Announce.

which will have a capacity of 50,000 bushels, and in elevators being constructed by the Marion Milling Co., in which space for 100,000 bushels has been arranged. These elevators will be ready for use early next month. Meanwhile the 35 grain elevators in Marion and nearby counties with which the company has arranged to purchase beans will hold the beans sold by growers in territory outside this immediate vicinity.

The Old Fort Mills plant is now under construction on the site of the old Studebaker-Walsh factory on North Grand avenue at the railroad tracks. The plant will be completed by Nov. 10 Mr. Holland said, and processing machinery will be installed by Nov. 13. Construction of the plant was started 30 days ago with George W. Timmons of Columbus as the contractor in charge of the work. John Moore of Marion is the architect. Local labor is being used in construction as much as possible. The building is of steel frame construction with a load capacity of 900 pounds per square inch. There are two stories and a basement and in addition to the space designed for storage and processing, the building will house the general office.

When the firm begins operation in November it will employ approximately 25 men in addition to executives and salesmen. Mr. Holland said. Later when the processing system is in full swing and virtually the entire bean crop in central Ohio is available to the company between 60 and 80 men will be put to work. The plant will operate the year around with day and night forces working 24 hours a day.

Will Need 500,000 Bushels

Mr. Holland predicted Old Fort Mills Inc. will buy and process 500,000 bushels of soy beans within the next year. All of the beans will be purchased in Marion and nearby counties and the western part of the state. According to figures submitted recently by County Farm Agent S. L. Anderson the current crop of soy beans in Marion county is 6,000 acres with an estimated yield of 18 to 20 bushels per acre. In the past soy beans have been raised in this section largely for hay. Mr. Anderson said it is a decided advantage to farmers to be able to thresh their crops of beans for a cash market he added. Under the federal AAA program farmers have been cutting down on their wheat and corn crops and are seeking a new cash market as a substitute for this reduction. Old Fort Mills Inc. offers them an excellent opportunity. Mr. Anderson said.

Schoolboy Patrols Again Formed To Help Prevent Injury To Pupils On Streets

Three groups of Marion boys who form the school boy patrol at Central and Vernon High and Junior High schools and St. Mary's Parochial school are doing their part toward making Marion streets safer for pupils.

The patrol is a voluntary organization which will work this week as well as next.

The first patrol in the city was organized at the Central Junior High school in 1931 by Miss Grace Colvin who is now the patrol advisor at the Vernon school.

The Central school located on a busy thoroughfare presents the greatest need of any of the three schools for such a patrol. School officials believe with the installation of a traffic light at Main and George streets this fall the hazard to school pupils at that crossing was virtually eliminated. At Vernon High school located on South Grand avenue the traffic problem is confined largely to directing the 150 bicycle riders who congest the street when school is dismissed.

Auto Club Cooperates

Cooperating with the schools throughout the city the Marion Auto club of which M. F. Baldwin is secretary has erected stop signs at danger points furnished large colored safety posters to all schools and given all schools safety lesson leaflets to be used in safety classes. Each spring the club gives certificates to the patrol boys.

The club this year purchased red flags lettered with Stop in white to be placed on long bamboo poles and used by the safety patrol in warning motorists.

A few Marion motorists who have been incautious and disregarded the patrol on duty have found to their financial loss in the municipal court that it pays in the end to obey these boys with the white Sam Brown belts who direct traffic when school is being dismissed at noon and night.

The Central school patrol boys halt three or four drivers into traffic court each year and so far they've never lost a case due to the thorough investigation made by the adviser A. T. Allen to be certain that the motorist has ignored the patrol and endangered the life and welfare of a boy or girl. The patrol boys do not stop cars. They take the license number and turn the number and a sworn account of the case over to the chief of police for action.

City police officials have given the patrol every cooperation in their work of making the streets safe for school children. At the beginning of the school year an officer on the force goes to the school and swears in the patrol boys.

At the Central school the boys take the following oath: I do solemnly take this oath that I will do my duty to my school and the patrol will aid in the prevention of accidents in school and on the street. I will do no act in school or on the street which will bring disgrace to my school my patrol and myself.

Boys May Be Fined

If any pupil or officer violates the school rules either in the building or on the grounds or in crossing the street he is brought before the Central school traffic court which meets in solemn dignity once a week is fined according to the magnitude of misconduct and is sent to jail. Slashing 50 minutes after school is the equivalent of one day's suspension. At Vernon High school the patrol and when she was transferred to the Vernon school in 1934 took charge of the boys.

Membership in the school boy patrol is a volunteer move on the part of the boys. At the Central school the members are from the eighth and ninth grades and are boys whose applications have been passed on by a committee of four teachers as to their scholarship and general behavior. The boys must have their parents consent before an application for membership in the patrol is considered. At the end of each year officers are selected for next year chosen from among the boys the other members and teachers believe most capable of taking charge of the patrol.

Boys from the seventh eighth and ninth grades are admitted to the Vernon patrol and each six weeks the captain and patrol are changed to give every boy an opportunity to serve.

Only ninth grade boys are admitted to the St. Mary's patrol. Their work consists mainly of duty at George and Prospect streets at noon and at night.

Bigger, Better.

If President Roosevelt had said to farmers that the AAA in the future was going to be bigger and better and therefore more satisfactory, he could have saved a lot of words in his Friday press conference. As it was, he said the farm benefit program was going to be continued and expanded. That it was a permanent activity of the federal government and that it was never slated for discard nor for decadence. On the contrary, President Roosevelt and his advisers intend to give agriculture the benefit of a large share of their attention. Unfortunately, a first term President's remarks must be scrutinized for points of political significance especially as preparations for a second term become the order of the day. In this case however, the political implication is so broad Mr. Roosevelt obviously didn't want it to be misread. Everybody knows he must command the agricultural vote to get reelected. He is cultivating the agricultural vote therefore directly and openly.

Agricultural adjustment may be imperfect and unsatisfactory. Farmers may look down their noses at it because they fear it will be ruled out by the supreme court. They may see places where the farm program could be improved. They may be annoyed by some phases of the program's administration. In short they may be wondering whether or not the whole setup couldn't be improved.

President Roosevelt has undertaken to reassure dubious farmers that improvement is being planned and that the agricultural program instead of being an emergency affair is permanent—as permanent as any one of the better established activities of the federal government. Coming on the eve of the corn hog referendum, the President's statement was a frank appeal for support by the nation's farmers.

Sen. Norris Could Do It

Sen. Norris of Nebraska who quietly announced recently he would retire from politics when his present term expires in 1937, could perform a distinguished service for the American public by explaining honestly how it feels to round out a career in congress. The suggestion is made seriously.

Sen. Norris has been a hard fighter. He has stuck to his guns in battles that wilted the courage of his contemporaries. He succeeded almost single handed in making a fundamental and a necessary change in the Constitution. He has been a good opponent and a good proponent. His sincerity rarely has been questioned.

Stradfastly, he has represented a view point in the national congress. Undoubtedly, he has had moments of indecision. Being human he must have doubted sometimes whether the game he was playing was worth the candle. Though still physically vigorous he is 74 years old and at 74 one is likely to admit some things aren't worth the struggle men make for them.

If there be a defense for public men who support themselves for a lifetime with service in an elective office Sen. Norris should be able to offer it as well or better than any man now living. A biography written against a background of inner feeling might command sympathy which few public men are able to command while they are objects of attack during the active years of their careers.

It is not known whether or not Sen. Norris plans to tell his story. Presumably his friends have asked him to do it long before this. It would be the nation's loss if he did not attempt to do what he is qualified so eminently to do well. It would be more than the story of Sen. Norris. It would be the story of public service in the United States.

The Eventual War.

It may be seen by reconstructing popular discussion as it existed a year ago that the outlook on war has changed greatly since news of Italy's preparations to invade Ethiopia first began to appear. The year 1935 has been a period of disillusionment in international relations. The effect of disillusionment may be observed in the fact that the next great war no longer is described as something that will happen at a vague date in the future. It is described, rather, as the inevitable result within the next few years of causes which are plainly visible.

Not all the causes are connected with Italy and Germany, not by any means. Italy happens to be prominent at the moment; Germany never is far away from the center of speculation. But British and American diplomats share their attention with another part of the world.

They are interested in Japan, another powerful factor in the eventual war which must be fought unless some miracle can be wrought to halt the world's drift to destruction. Little interest in Japan furthermore does not detract from their interest in Europe because in all expert speculation on war Japan and Europe are inseparable.

Informed guessers speak apprehensively of a combination of Japan, Italy and Germany against Great Britain, France and Russia. They think of the eventual war in terms of an alliance between governments drawn into an alliance by common belief in the superiority of the state and government which place the individual above the state. They place Russia with France and Great Britain because they cannot place it with Italy and Japan.

They are guessing of course but their guess is a deadly serious. They feel sure that war is going to come not as a tragedy for their children but as a tragedy for themselves. The sound of marching feet and martial songs fills the air. Perhaps the most important fact which confirms this is the virtual certainty of war in the near future. Preparations for it are a most complete.

Safety Week.

No annual program is of greater personal interest and value to citizens generally than the one started here today in observance of 1935 "Safety Week."

Launched two years ago by Marion citizens and organizations in cooperation with the state industrial commission, this yearly event has been notably successful in every respect. It has yielded beneficial results which is the real test of merit and effectiveness. Some annual weeks and similar occasions designated on the calendar for special observance are given recognition and then seemingly forgotten. This has not been the case with safety week, probably because people realize that the lessons it teaches are intended for the protection of their own lives and property and consequently should be heeded constantly as a matter of personal welfare.

This week's program is to occupy three days and in that time much ground will be covered. The campaign for accident and fire prevention will be carried to fact areas, schools and offices—all places where the need for guarding against hazards and needless risks is most urgent.

Imparting safety instructions to school children is an especially important phase of the program and one of far-reaching possibilities. By implanting ideas of accident prevention in the minds of young people more is accomplished than promoting safety for the benefit of life will yield now and in the immediate future. The warnings given conveyed to them for making life safer and consequently longer are very likely to leave permanent impressions in their minds and consequently be of value to them and their associates throughout life. That will be the case if the instructions come from persons who are qualified to speak and who are able to speak with conviction.

Fortunately speakers of that kind are enlisted in this week's program. They come from the state industrial commission equipped with thorough knowledge of their subject gained through study, research and experience. Consequently they are assured attentive audiences whether made up of adults or children and what they have to say is certain to be of lasting benefit.

Safety week is intended to save lives and property and there is reason to believe that its observance in past years has been productive of such results. Consequently each year's program should be given increased public cooperation and attention for the good accomplished will be in proportion to the number of participants. That should include everybody.

Watchdogs.

Cliffhangers of the department of justice G-men probably will not be repeated for the benefit of the latest department of federal agents. The women. The stuff of heroism simply doesn't exist in the work they will do.

They will follow clues for the works progress administration which will hope to employ 3,500,000 Americans on public projects. Their job will be to see that pay checks go to the right places. They will be watchdogs over one part of the government's relief expenditures.

Some of the women are former G-men. Instead of being alert to catch kidnappers and other big time criminals they will keep their eyes open for grafters trying to get both hands into Uncle Sam's capacious pockets. It is an interesting idea even though it sounds like depressing work. Perhaps if all units of government were to employ investigators to see what happens to public money grafting would become one of the lost arts. The watchdogs might be worth their weight in gold if they could stay alive and honest. If the works progress administration knew sleuths could discover why the work relief program has bogged down so badly that alone would entitle them to their first year's salary from the public treasury.

Neighborhood History

EARLY SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES. The early schools of Ashmun township in Wyandot county were conducted under great difficulties. The first schools were held in the dormitory of Thomas Terry, according to historians.

The first school house was erected in the village of Wyandot in 1835. It was a cabin and the first teacher was Thomas T. Thompson who later taught in the mission school.

The first meetings to be held by the church-going residents of the community were held in the local school house in 1836. In 1838 the Methodist Episcopal church building was erected.

Royal Prown is regarded by magazine editors as the ace of the love interest. His dreamy canoe drifting in the moonlight romances are sure fire circulation builders and his career is an epic of courage in affliction. As a fiction reporter 20 years ago he became a story teller. He now lives in a fling of portable houses along a black stretch of Cape Cod a life of shy remoteness. He married a girl reporter whose lips he has learned to read and she is a newspaper when editors call Brown now 50 away from his typewriter spends most of his time in a fast motor boat.

Josephine Baker, the band leader from deep Harlem who went to Paris became a famous dancer and annexed a waxed mustache. Italian count finds her return to America something of a triumph. And has been invited to many smart teas and after theater flings. She appears in zapping creations and rattles away in French like a born Parisian. Josephine has sailed her earnings too. And has a peck of jewels to boot.

Personal nomination for the most expertly typed man about town—William Rhinelanders Stewart.

Ex King Alfonso seeks Americans almost solely in his lighter moments in Europe. His special liking for Yankee began when Alexander Moore became American ambassador to his country. Through Moore he became familiar with the power and later chummy with several Americans including Erskine Gwynne for inconspicuous rounds of Paris. For a very long time he has been eager to visit the states particularly Hollywood. He is a pronounced movie fan and among his favorite are Lucille Young, Marion Davies, Joan Crawford and Ruth Chatterton. For laughs he likes the flatterings of Edward Everett Horton.

The most auspicious sign up from the sidewalk hero of the night clubs is Eddie under the imperator now winking, fat ray as a published flou entertainer in evening dress and slick hat. But many more are he was a night club employer but in one of the most inconspicuous jobs he opened and closed auto doors for arriving and departing guests.

The flialo again has two of its former stage favorites—Lee Tracy and Jimmy Durante—after a year's sabbatical years in Hollywood. In the manner of Walter Huston another forthright actor who won film distinction by a no back to their early love. Like Huston they were appearing in too many pictures and too often miscast. Huston's experiment resulted in a flood of new movie offers.

Bagatelle Dean Harper of the Texas university is a red hot funder. Frank R. Adams was the last of Ray Long's friends to see him alive. Morrie Galt appeared in the London Savoy recently without fussy hat and black bow tie. Nobody recognized him. Lily Pons must can imitate Peppé the Ballerina. A razor hunt started for the Ethiopian war on two hours notice.

Bob Davis was talking about the passing of red hot profanity. It rarely heard any more now on tongue and throat. As a matter of fact some of the most amazing cuss words are cuss words. We had a grizzly cholera character—Grandpa used to say he looked as though he had been chewing tobacco all day against a strong wind—in our town who when angry would shout "Snarlrocket. Try it out loud the next time you fly into a real rage. It's the real thing." (Copyright 1935 McNaught Syndicate)

The meeting was interrupted several times by wet sympathizers and Mr. Starns stopped in the middle of his talk to engage in a wet fight which he described as a very interesting and spirited debate with a whiskey salesman from Cleveland.

Behind The News In Washington and Wall Street

BY PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The latest subterranean line on Herbert Hoover's vacation. He is not only bronzed, but is reported that he had been required to let his belt out a notch or two. More obvious was the improvement of his disposal. He had been rather sharp and sarcastic on occasions before he began his vacation. Note—The President got all the day catching publicity during his trip by sending his 134 pound sail fish to the museum. Unheralded and unannounced was the fact that his body guard Gus Gennrich caught one sixteen pounds heavier which will not be mounted in a museum. That is what is behind arrangements now being made for Mr. Roosevelt to deliver an address there around Thanksgiving. The site in mind is Tech Stadium at Atlanta which is under Gov. Tamm's nose. Their apprehensions have been lessened by private word from a most influential Georgia leader that he can take (his word) Tall made any time he new deal wants him. Preparation Some of the delegations to the convention are already as good as present although the convention is eight months away. You may mark off New York for Snell Hill, not preponderantly for Knox, Kansas for Landon and (mark you well) Michigan unrepresented. This does not mean that Sen. Vandenberg of Michigan has been eliminated on the contrary private bidders for his stock have been bullish lately. They figure that if the convention develops into a scrap between Sen. Borah and the rest of the Republican world at large Mr. Van Denberg will have made no enemies particularly not in Sen. Arthur Borah's camp. New dealers are loyally backslapping with a sharp new housing bill. It was put forward in one of those blue book (filled with money) reports prepared by Prof. Volney's friend Alvin Freed. He appears to be backed in this instance by American Rolling Mills, Firestone Tire, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Westinghouse and several others equally important. This third blue book volume has been submitted confidentially to leading officials, counseling government backing for a privately built low cost ($3,000) housing program based on 4 1/2 per cent mortgage 10 to 20 per cent down with a 90 per cent government guarantee for which only one-quarter of 1 per cent would be charged. It may give the 6 per cent mortgage bankers the jitters to contend with a reduction in interest and down payment but at least two big new dealers are already behind the project. You may hear much more of this shortly.

The big boys seem to feel certain that this is the situation because it fits in with what they know. For instance they have checked around the country on Mr. Hoover's possibilities for their own reform. They are convinced that if he goes into the market for southern delegates (who come high these days) his maximum possible strength at the convention would be 200 delegates. If he does not enter that expensive market he will be "far weaker." In either event he can be a factor but not a nominee.

Brokers are naturally glad to see big trading days again. They help buy shoes for baby. But there's much head-baking in inner circles about the sudden spread of public participation. Those who might be called small amateurs paid comparatively little attention to stock market gains until a week or so ago—but now there's ample evidence that the butcher and baker and candle stick maker have climbed aboard for another jolt. Uninformed optimism is terrifically contagious—and there's no telling where it will lead. It's far more rhythmic than reason. The securities exchange commission margin rules will help somewhat to keep out the "sheep-herders"—and they have always been a particular menace to market stability in the past. But Mr. Eichel better get busy with his comparable rules for banks or speculative credit will get out of hand again. One reason no such regulations have been promulgated for banks before now is that the would have forced a wave of liquidation of undermargined loans on the head. But any stock investor still undermargined after recent gains ought to be checked in the nearest ash can. Recent public interest seems to focus chiefly on steel, oil and utility

LILIES OF THE CAMILLS
 Men will have to learn how to cook. Oh yes they will! If all the women's colleges follow the regime about to be adopted by the college of St. Lawrence University. Men will have to learn to cook or go hungry.

According to news reports these tender young things are going to be encouraged to breakfast in bed on Sunday mornings as one of the luxuries that every woman is entitled to.

And this in times when a young man doesn't know where to turn for a job and a college man can't even make a living willing bond!

Won't it be just too lovely when these pampered girls graduate and fall in love with some nice young man who is struggling along on $20 a week as a law-clerk or a newspaper reporter or a hospital intern or a traveling salesman?

Who is going to get up and burn the lamb chops mix the muffins or let the kidney stew boil over? Hubby—that's who!

TOOTH PRESERVATION IS TRACED TO FOOD

Dieting Should Start With Mother Months Before Baby Birth, Doctors Say

Why don't our teeth last a life time? Why does practically every man or woman you know have some filled teeth or some missing teeth? How is it that in any group of children who have had their second or permanent teeth only a short time you are sure to find from three to five out of every ten in the group of dentists' care? Isn't it surprising that there are so many quite little children with badly decayed baby teeth?

Why don't our teeth last?

Of late years doctors and dentists have been working hard to find a satisfactory answer to this question.

Diet Is a Clue
 Scientific facts seem to indicate that having good teeth does not depend so much on race or heredity as on what one eats. Scientists however are not satisfied with indications. They look for proof. They have experimented with the diets of small animals and they have found that the teeth of animals will decay when they are fed on a diet of certain food elements. The scientists have even been able by controlling the food to make the teeth decay and then by an other change of diet to check the decay.

What we eat then has much to do with the formation of good teeth. Specialists in the National Health council say we must be gin to build good teeth early. "When?" perhaps you ask. Shall we begin when the baby cuts his first tooth? No that is a whole year too late. Six or seven months before the baby is born his teeth are beginning to be formed and at birth they are almost fully developed and waiting ready in his jaws for the time to come through. All through those months before birth the mother is the child's only source of nourishment. So that to give a baby a set of sound teeth the most important thing is for his mother to eat the foods that supply good tooth material. What we can do for a child's teeth after they come through is always less than what the mother can do before the birth and while she is nursing him.

Drink Milk
 What are the tooth building foods? First of all milk. A quart a day is considered best for every child and every expectant mother. At the very least a pint. If safe fresh milk cannot be had or if it is too expensive evaporated milk will serve the purpose.

After milk come fruits and vegetables—some raw and some cooked. Orange and tomato juice are very valuable and if in any way possible one or other should always be included in the daily foods. Canned tomatoes are cheap even when oranges are dear and are just as good as tooth builders.

Having made sure of milk and a variety of fruits and vegetables including potatoes see next that some of the bread or the cereal eaten is made of whole grain—is dark in color some meat or egg will be needed but these you are not so likely to overlook.

HIGH COURAGE

(Copyright, 1933, by Jeanne Bowman)
 "I know I'm an old crank," she began. "Oh yes I am, but I'm not half as cranky as I could be if I had a chance. Nikki I love every blessed child in that family but you can't expect growing boys to be quiet and you can't expect them not to have company and you can't expect them not to tear the roof off the house. And after I've had a day in the canner with machinery roaring over my head, I'd like a little quiet. Have some salad!"

Arne put some potato salad on the paper plate Lissa had handed her accepted a brown topped bun, and a stuffed egg.

"Have you looked at this house?" she asked abruptly.

"No, confessed Arne. "I don't much but it's livable and we could rent it for twenty a month. We'd have to do a lot of re-paring inside, but it would be worth it in the long run."

"That?" Arne inquired weekly looking up at a sagging shutter.

"Yes," Arne put some potato salad on the paper plate Lissa had handed her accepted a brown topped bun, and a stuffed egg.
